That's the biggest one I've ever seen!
It's like a giant
eye in the sky!
What is it?
Is it a god?
Or a demon?
Or something
even worse?

That's the

Finally, the enormous bubbling volcano had stopped erupting.

Almost that same moment when the volcano stopped erupting, the enormous volcano stopped erupting.

The water had dried up completely, the heat was so intense the flames.

It was the first time that the volcano had ever erupted. It was the first time that the volcano had ever erupted.

Finally, the volcano had stopped erupting. The volcano had stopped erupting. The volcano had stopped erupting.

1. The first step in the process of identifying a problem is to determine the nature of the problem. This involves a thorough understanding of the situation and the factors that may be contributing to the problem. Once the nature of the problem is understood, the next step is to identify the causes of the problem. This involves a detailed analysis of the situation and the factors that may be contributing to the problem. Once the causes of the problem are identified, the next step is to develop a plan of action. This involves determining the steps that need to be taken to address the problem and the resources that will be required to implement the plan. Once a plan of action has been developed, the next step is to implement the plan. This involves carrying out the steps that have been identified in the plan of action. Finally, the last step in the process is to evaluate the results of the plan. This involves determining whether the plan has been successful in addressing the problem and whether any further action is required.

PASSPORT TO FAME

If you are like most American boys and girls, we guess you want an education after you leave high school, unless you are planning to work at some particular trade which does not call for formal education.

An education is a wonderful thing, not only because it brings you satisfaction in the joy of learning about all sorts of things but also because it is the open door to high paying jobs.

Here in the United States there are over a thousand colleges or universities. Some are excellent, some inferior. The only important thing about any institution of learning is not what the buildings look like, but rather what sort of men and women are on the faculty—collectively, the best colleges are those which employ the outstanding men.

To qualify as a college student you must first of all pass certain examinations which will show what your general background and possibilities are for becoming a worthwhile member of a college group. Your school record for the high school years must be good, though not necessarily brilliant and your character recommendations not very important.

If you decide that you wish to attend a college or university, it is a good idea to allow your school of desirability so that some responsible person will make sure that you will be taking the subjects required by most colleges to prepare you for entrance. There are called College Preparatory courses in some states and depend very much upon what your particular choice of a college may demand in the way of subjects. Most good universities require from their candidates a certain number of years of mathematics, science, languages, both Latin and one other, four years of English and some history and social sciences.

The requirements for these courses have been greatly changed in the past few years. It used to be pretty cut and dried for an applicant to present in his record as many years of each of the above studies, but nowadays many effective studies that a brilliant student may, for some reason or other, not be outstanding in even capable of passing examinations in a subject unrelated to his particular course.

However, the general record is important and must be superior in relation to the rest of his class. What colleges are most interested in today is not necessarily how many facts a person has acquired, but rather how he ap-apply his knowledge to any given problem. In the last instances, after an applicant passes the preliminary requirements—high school record, College Board exams, etc.—there is then given what is called a Scholarship Achievement test.

There is known of other names in other parts of the country, but the general idea is in that same group of many different things. The theory is that a person may, in his custom in previous years of grammar and high school, have acquired no motivation enough to pass his exams with flying colors. But, if there are only facts in his mind with no inclination to anything else, then his mind is not "college material."

Let us say, then, that you not only wish to go to college, but that you have been accepted at the college of your choice. No doubt your family has been instrumental in guiding you to an education of this sort. But let us suppose that the solution is there but not the money. A college education is expensive if you choose to attend one of the "big" universities—Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Stanford, Columbia, Cornell, Duke, etc. Or, if you are a girl, your choice might be Smith, Wellesley, Radcliffe or Bryn Mawr.

If you have an exceptionally good record and if your qualifications are unusually high, you can apply for a scholarship at any university. There are full and partial scholarships which help to take care of tuition, usually in the neighborhood of $600 to $700 a year in the major universities. If you live nearby, you can live at home and attend as a day student.

If you have to live on campus, there are numerous ways of working for your room and board. Many students wait on tables, work in the library, or run small businesses on the side in order to defray expenses. There are employment bureaus in most colleges where any student can usually hope to find a position which will take a few hours a week of his free time and allow him to support himself.

And then, of course, there is a state university in each state where you can attend for very little. In some states, tuition is free and room and board are extremely inexpensive. It is well to investigate all possibilities before you enter your senior year in high school. Most colleges and universities are crowded now and it is wiser to wait until the last minute before at least doing some research into what is possible for you as the way of a college. Don't be discouraged by factors which may now seem to present great obstacles to your wish for an education. If you want it badly enough you'll get it.

Sometimes you may be told that four years is an awfully long time to be away at an institution of higher learning while your friends who are less ambitious are working and earning salaries while you are getting your degree. Just remember that your degree will represent as much more than four years of study.

It means a passport to citizenship, a priceless opportunity for advancement that will change your entire life, a real investment in happiness and the security, the real security that comes from having developed your mind as well as your capacities, your outlook on life, and your ability to get along with people through understanding.
